Getty Images While we never get your Hogwarts acceptance letter, there happen to be some pretty magical alternatives that you can visit around the world. 1 of 15 Hohenzollern Castle, Germany's gorgeous Hohenzollern Castle, which sits on Mount Berg Hohenzollern in Germany, has been around since 1,000 years ago. Once privately owned, the gardens are now open for sightseeing and attract visitors from all over the world. (And yes, that means we muggles.) 2 of the 15 Mont Saint Michel Abbey, France's Mont Saint Michel Abbey in Normandy, France, is known for its amazing Gothic architecture and rich religious history. According to its website, in its more than 2,000-year existence, the institution was a church, prison and tourist attraction - but surprisingly, never in the corridors where Harry, Ron and Hermione walked into class. 3 of the 15 Shambles, England in the heart of York, England, you can find Shambles, a famous street filled with a variety of shops and restaurants. Tourist and local favorite, daintily designed warehouses and narrow streets resemble Harry's shopping center Diagon Alley. Hopefully Ollivander's is just around the corner. 4 of the 15 Glamis Castle, Scotland's Glamis Castle in Glamis, Scotland, is both a functioning residence and a historic tourist attraction, but not a magical wizard's school. The castle, which has been around since the early 1300s, is home to Earl and countess strathmore and Kinghorne. Castle spaces can be rented for events such as wedding receptions, fashion shows and grand dinners. 5 of the 15 Ribbleshead overpasses, England's Ribbleshead overpass is the Settle-Carlisle railway in North Yorkshire, England that channels the railway featured in the Harry Potter movies. Unfortunately, the line doesn't really run to Hogwarts, but we can dream. 6 of the 15 Hebel Academy of Fine Arts, China Hebel Academy of Fine Arts is a selective art university located in Hebei, China, not far from Beijing. With its near-gravity-defying clock and castle-like spires, the university shares a striking resemblance to Harry's alma mater. 7 out of 15 Rothenburg ob der Tauber, Germany The tiny town of Rothenburg ob der Tauber is located in northern Bavaria, Germany and is a real-life version of hogsmeade. From its beautiful cobbled roads to medieval architecture, the village looks frozen in time from its construction in the Middle Ages. The city's lively tourism industry is perfect for any passionate Potter fan. 8 out of 15 Prague Castle, Czech Republic In a city where each street looks like a fairy tale, it is not surprising that the breathtaking Prague Castle would look like a fancy place. Built in the 880s, the castle is still the largest castle in the world. You can just picture Harry and friends coming to Hogwarts for the first time here. * Cue Hedwig's 9 of the 15 Suzzallo Library, University of Washington If Hogwart's Great Hall ever needed to move, a graduate reading room at the University of Washington would probably be the next best option. Designed in a collegiate Gothic style, the Graduate Reading Room is designed in a collegiate Gothic style and features stained glass windows and dimmed chandeliers that add a haunting aura to the room. 10 of the 15 Balfour Castle, UK Balfour Castle, despite its name, is not actually a castle, but rather a five-star hotel on the small Shapinsay island of Orkney, UK. Outward-looking towers and spirals are perfect for the richly decorated Victorian interior. But do not be afraid, the forest of property is far from forbidden and was created simply to give the hotel privacy. 11 of the 15 Annenberg Hall, Harvard University's Annenberg Hall at Harvard University is almost identical to the Great Hall, except for floating candles on the ceiling. According to its website, Annenberg Hall served as a student in the commons that held dances, banquets and rehearsals before becoming a dining room for university students - miraculously appearing dishes not included. 12 of the 15 Ashford Castle, Ireland Ashford Castle is a magnificent 83-room hotel located in the quiet village of Mayo, Ireland. The unique hotel allows its customers to live as royalties surrounded by medieval architecture and elegantly decorated rooms. It's hard to believe that this is not the place Harry learned to fly a broom in his first year. In 13 of the 15 Learning Departments, the University of Pittsburgh at the University of Pittsburgh in Pennsylvania, you can find the Learning Department - a Gothic-style tower that is dedicated to study room for university students. According to his website, the architect designed columns that stretch up to a high ceiling to inspire the idea that learning is endless; the motto Hermione would love. 14 of the 15 Château Frontenac, Quebec's picturesque Château Frontenac is a French-style hotel in Quebec City, Canada. Châteauesque-style architecture and accent spot lights can be seen in its reflection on the St. Lawrence River, giving the building a magical look. Fortunately, you don't really know any spells to spend the night here. 15 of the 15 Neuschwanstein Castle, Germany On a hill above the town of Hohenschwangau in southwestern Bavaria, Germany, sits the magnificent Neuschwanstein Castle. Once a Bavarian royalty home, the gardens were open to the public in 1886 and attract more than a million visitors a year, according to the castle's website. The design is the inspiration for Disney theme parks Cinderella Castle and clearly resembles Hogwarts Castle, especially in winter. Yule Ball, anyone? Someone?
